

Option 2: KEEP CURRENT WORSHIP SCHEDULE (SEP-MAY): Sundays at 8:15, 9:30 (+Children's Education) and 11:00am
Option 2 Feedback
Gains
Much more time to get all up and ready
People are more likely to come to the 11am service. I really like this time.
We (read: my husband) like the later worship time. However...if there is a significant cost savings we would support going to two services.
Music/type of worship can have greater variance (traditional -> contemporary) as people do have their preferences
It's tradition. It allows Sunday School teachers a choice of services to attend.
People like things to stay the same.
Familiar schedule and worship style
No change can be good
Contemporary service every week
Change is difficult for some
More choices of worship times for all
Variety of services and consistent for people's schedules
A weekly service with Praise & Worship music
Variety of service offerings and times
No change management
Provides much more time for people to attend church
Please all body clocks
I think the people who attend the two later services will be most affected and should have the most say in the decision.
Praise & Worship team performs each week
Minimizes concerns over people transferring to another church because their worship time was eliminated
More options
Time options are nice
Set Praise & Worship/traditional services each Sunday
It's what we're used to. Less communication/adjustments required. It's easier
People like their routines. The early birds seem to really love their mornings
People with busy kids like to be done at 9:30am service and get to their next activities
More time to connect with old friends and new, in between services
Losses
Services appear low in attendance
Staff/musicians outnumber congregants
Smaller attendance
More challenging to have guest preachers or guest musicians to sing/play for 3 services
Some will stay home because they like to go at the regular times they are used to Ushers, communion servers, lectors would be divided between 2 services rather than 3 services and could be scheduled less frequently
Fewer in attendance as members are spread out over 3 services
Less people in each service. 11am service is usually sparse
Three services is a lot for current staff as well as musicians and booth staff
Not having more bodies at each service as I think people feel better and are supported by greater attendance
Parking places may be more difficult to get (between services)
Continue to provide a service that is not well attended
Too much effort for those leading services
Three services are not needed
Less attendance at each service
The most affected will be families and those people who like to sleep-in on weekends, or those who like the contemporary service
Will affect the musicians who play at the 11am service
Very small 8:15 and 11am services
Small attendance at each services
Struggle to find readers, greeters, and ushers
If you enjoy 11am service, it makes it hard to attend that service and bring your child to Sunday school
Sparse attendance at one or more services
It's depressing to see so few people in church. It doesn't look good on the live-stream videos.
It's the same effort for each service for staff/tech/musicians but 3 times vs 2 times each Sunday.
Some services not as full
Challenges
Makes for a long morning/day for those that have to be here for all services
It's hard on pastors to preach their sermon 3 times. It makes for a long Sunday morning. There is almost no break between 1st & 2nd service, that is not a positive.
It's more challenging for Rob to have 3 services for musicians/singers.
Organists have two services to cover - as usual.
